

Round table discussion on sustainable urban resilience:
mobilising resources, coordinating support

What is the role of government organisations, private and non-government organisations and citizens and what are the project development priorities in urban areas to attain the goals set by the international community on sustainable urban resilience?

The idea of the discussion is to mobilise resources and coordinating support to foster interdisciplinary approaches, to develop innovative policies, projects and collaborations to attain the ambitious targets set by the European 2020 strategy and the international community, including: sustainable development, energy efficiency, sustainable mobility and air quality and a sustainable innovative economy.

The roundtable discussion is seen as the first step towards an open international forum to create consensus on solutions and best practices which can directly impact urban sustainability and resilience as well indirectly produce economic recovery dynamics in order to define the operation of the governance structures which could consolidate and bring forward such an alliance globally.

AGENDA: 6th of February - 4-8pm, London School of Economics and Political Science

Opening of roundtable discussion: Diego Navarra, 'New Ideas on Urban Resilience'

Moderator: Brian Emmott, 'UN Global Compact/RICS, UN Global Compact Cities programme and Circles of Sustainability'

Participants are welcome from academia, industry as well as government and non-government organisations. The event is free, however RSVP no later than the 31st of January to register to attend at diego@studionavarra.co.uk